Comfort Without Conditions; Presence Without Pressure

Bright Spot Changed My Life Forever! by Susan Z. Robins

Susan and Shadow

*"If you love what you do, you'll never work a day in your life."
- Marc Anthony*

It took more than fifty years for all the pieces of my life to come together, but for nearly fifteen of those years, I woke up each day with clarity, meaning, and purpose. Bright Spot Therapy Dogs played a transformative role in helping me get there. This is my story.

I spent many decades in a career I genuinely loved; it was engaging, challenging, and fulfilling in many ways. Yet over time, I began to feel a quiet pull toward something more - something deeper and more emotionally meaningful.

In 2010, my beloved Standard Poodle, Shadow (who was a puppy at the time) and I enrolled in a series of training classes at the MSPCA/Angell Animal Medical Center in Boston. Those classes culminated in the Canine Good Citizen (CGC) test. Admittedly, it took us two attempts to pass, as Shadow had a hard time walking past the irresistible pull of the treat table - a temptation that was strictly off-limits during the exam!

Bringing comfort to those who need it most.

Dear Friends,

Bright Spot Therapy Dogs, Inc. continues to grow, supporting a variety of communities and facilities. I am thrilled to share that we currently have more than 350 active therapy dog teams visiting throughout New England and other parts of the country. Each team makes an average of 50 visits per year, totaling more than 17,000 visits annually!

In 2025, 93 teams completed our training course and 94 new teams were certified. Our 2026 training courses are running at full capacity, with 8–10 teams enrolled in each session. We currently have 12 training courses scheduled for the year and anticipate adding another. Our dedicated trainers, Katie O'Brien, Nancy Ronan, and Cathie Parsons, continue to provide engaging, high-quality training sessions for prospective teams.

We are deeply grateful to our therapy dog teams who live our mission every day by providing comfort and caring through the human-canine bond, visiting hundreds of facilities and bringing support to thousands of people each year. Recently, several teams answered the call to support grieving communities. Staff from Connecticut Community College – Three Rivers reached out following the loss of two students. Soon after, MIT requested therapy dog teams to support their campus community after the death of a professor. Our volunteers responded to both requests almost immediately, recognizing the magnitude of the need. Their presence lifted spirits, offered connection, and provided a much-needed respite from the pain and stress that accompany loss.

We also remain focused on supporting and celebrating our volunteers. Volunteers renew their certification each June and, thanks to Volunteer Liaison Cathie Parsons, our member retention rate was an impressive 88% for the second year in a row. In September, we held our second annual Volunteer Social Gathering, which included our first-ever dog show. Over 40 volunteers attended, many bringing human and canine guests. Every dog who entered the show won an award. Titles included Best Eyelashes, Fluffiest, Curliest Tail, and Friendliest, making it a joyful celebration of the special dogs and handlers who make our work possible.

For the second year in a row, Bright Spot participated in more than 40 community outreach events, including parades, library talks, pet festivals, and other local gatherings. Led by Assistant Director Nancy Ronan, these events offer opportunities for people to learn about our mission, connect with our teams, and consider whether their own dogs might make wonderful therapy partners.

Finally, we remain profoundly thankful to our donors and sponsors. As a no-fee-for-service organization, we rely entirely on the generosity of individuals, foundations, and community partners to sustain and grow our work.

Thank you for being part of the Bright Spot community and for helping us continue to spread comfort, connection, and caring through the human-canine bond.

Warmest regards,

Michelle T. Karb

Eventually, we did pass, and our journey continued as we trained to become a Certified Therapy Dog Team through Bright Spot Therapy Dogs. Unlike the CGC test, Shadow passed the pet therapy evaluation with flying colors. He was a natural - especially when he realized that successful performances were rewarded with a well-earned treat. Even during the exam, he instinctively connected with the seniors, clearly in his element.

Shadow makes a friend

We returned to the Greater Boston area eager to make a difference in the lives of older adults who often experience loneliness and isolation. At first, we created our own volunteer opportunities. Before long, we were spending Saturday mornings visiting our “regulars” at several nearby independent living communities. Those initial experiences changed both of our lives, forever.

What began as ad hoc visits, quickly became a weekly ritual we looked forward to with great joy. Shadow left each interaction feeling energized - tail wagging and proud of the work he had accomplished. I left with a full heart - uplifted by the smiles, stories, laughter, and the unmistakable power of genuine human connection.

These experiences fueled my sole. And in that moment, I knew I had found my calling. I wanted to work with seniors. Every day. All day. With my dog.

With renewed clarity, we searched for organizations that could see the unique value of combining pet therapy with Sales and Marketing; ultimately, we found that job opportunity within the home care and hospice industry.

Shadow connects with a patient

Until his passing, in February 2025, Shadow and I regularly visited more than fifty rehabilitation hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, and independent, assisted living, and memory care communities throughout Greater Boston. Together, we brought comfort, joy, and connection to hundreds of seniors, loved ones, caregivers, and staff.

Every day was an adventure. Every day, we helped brighten lives.

Along the way, we inspired colleagues to pursue certification through Bright Spot Therapy Dogs - expanding the circle of care and connection for even more seniors across the region.

When a therapy dog passes, the loss is shared. I still feel Shadow's absence deeply, and so do the seniors, caregivers, and staff who often ask about him or quietly remember the comfort he brought. Though he is gone, the connection, joy, and calm he created continue to live on in the lives he touched.

To my beloved Shadow - and to Bright Spot Therapy Dogs - thank you for helping me realize my dream, and for the extraordinary work you do every day.

I am now preparing to welcome a new Standard Poodle into my life and hope to continue Shadow's legacy as part of the Bright Spot Therapy Dog community. 🐾

Islay is a Natural by Bill Ross

Islay at the airport

Islay and I have been enjoying dog therapy work for almost two years. I knew Islay would be a natural, given her temperament and unconditional affection that she exhibited as a puppy. Islay, a yellow English Labrador Retriever, just turned 4. I live in Granby, Connecticut, and two friends, who had been with Bright Spot for over eight years, encouraged Islay and me to take the Bright Spot Therapy Dogs training course. Islay and I have had many wonderful experiences as a Bright Spot Team since becoming certified.

Islay loves children. We visit with young readers (grades K-2) for "Read to a Dog" in the evenings at the Avon, Connecticut, Public Library. Additionally, we visit the Granby Public Schools to provide stress relief during high school mid-terms and finals, and we also spend meaningful time with special needs students.

Islay and I also visit the Newington VA Clinic and the Connecticut Soldiers Home. These visits are very rewarding, as many veterans are reminded of their dogs when they were younger. Many folks are in their 80s and 90s and have medical issues. Spending time with Islay is comforting.

Islay and I are one of several teams called Bradley Buddies who visit the Bradley International Airport in Hartford. We visit Bradley twice a week for 1 1/2 hours. It's a very meaningful experience and for many travelers and airport workers, it's a real stress reliever. 🐾

Therapy Dogs Create ‘Bright Spot’ at Bradley International Airport

by Ryan Tenney

The partnership between Bradley International Airport (BDL) and Bright Spot Therapy Dogs, Inc. has been ongoing for nearly a decade. In that time, the Bradley Buddies program has created a unique and memorable experience for the millions of passengers who travel through BDL every year.

The initial vision and conversations that brought BDL and Bright Spot together were rooted in the desire to integrate therapy dogs within the airport environment. Why? Traveling can produce a vast array of emotions for those taking to the skies – well beyond excitement for setting off on a vacation. There can be sadness for having to go visit a sick family member or leave loved ones behind, stress of a business trip, fear of the unknown for first-time flyers, and so much more. Who better to help provide comfort and a calming presence than a four-legged friend?

Bradley Buddies was officially launched in August 2017 with just two certified therapy dog teams visiting the airport twice a week. Employees of the Connecticut Airport Authority, which oversees the operation of BDL, helped come up with the program name. Fast forward to today - the program has grown to 18 dogs and handlers who rotate coming to the airport weekly to interact with passengers.

The interactions happening at BDL between these incredible Bright Spot therapy dog teams and passengers is on full display when walking through the terminal. People of all ages melt at the sight of a therapy dog passing by. That excitement quickly builds when they see the dog wearing a vest that says “please pet me.” Children smile amid their gentle and meaningful interactions, adults quickly lower themselves closer to the floor for a dog pet or belly rub, and others quickly take out a phone to snap a photo with the dogs. Any stress or anxiety that existed beforehand quickly melts away and leaves a lasting impact. That’s what the Bradley Buddies program is all about. That’s what it was designed to do.

Over the last nine years, there’s been a great deal of promotion and publicity centered around the Bradley Buddies. In fact, many of the dogs have become celebrities in their own right – easily identifiable to passengers walking through the terminal. They even have their own collectible trading cards, which the handlers give out, with photos and facts about each dog. BDL has promoted the teams on its social platforms and included the dogs and their handlers in media events at the airport and during live TV broadcasts as a way to give the Bradley Buddies program the recognition it deserves.

The partnership between BDL and Bright Spot exemplifies how community-oriented initiatives can enhance customer experience and create a more relaxed, supportive atmosphere in the airport environment. Bradley extends its immense gratitude to Bright Spot and the growing number of dedicated therapy dog teams for their unwavering commitment to the Bradley Buddies program. 🐾

Dogs, Kids, and Books: A Magical Combination

by Susan Block

Dogs and kids are a magical combination. And when books are added in, the possibilities (and the fun) multiply. Dante, the Golden Retriever, has been going regularly to the Valente Branch of the Cambridge Public Library as their one and only therapy dog. The library is adjacent to the King Open School (brilliant) and, at about 3:15 on school days, the library is flooded with children who come directly after school. Dante is “their” dog for reading, and he loves it. He greets the kids hanging around outside, says hello to the staff at the front desk and then goes to his office, where he lies down on the floor next to the beanbags.

choose a book they want to read.

Basically, Dante just lies there, snuggles, lets children snuggle, provides licks and sometimes singing in his sleep. The trick for Dante is to make sure he comes to the library tired, so I bring him after 2 hours of chasing balls and playing at the park with his eight-dog pack. There are quite a few regular “customers” who just like reading with Dante. I chat with the kids, help them feel comfortable, and assist with words when they need it, demonstrate how gentle Dante is, and sometimes, ask Dante to do a trick, which children love.

Usually, Dante has six 15-minute appointments. I sit next to him. The program is arranged by one of the librarians, Aruna Gopalan, who does an amazing job organizing, scheduling, and recruiting kids to read to Dante. She has a gift for choosing and supporting kids, usually between the ages of 3 and 10, who are a little scared of dogs or reading or both, kids who are curious about dogs, kids who like dog books, and groups of friends who want to have a group reading-with-a-dog experience. Friends, including teenagers, sometimes bring a classmate who is scared of dogs to meet with Dante, usually with a good amount of joking around, teasing, and encouragement. Sometimes parents come in, especially with the younger kids. Aruna encourages each child to

After Dante is done reading with the kids, he has dog time with the staff to provide a bit of fun, cuddling, and ridiculousness to help them decompress towards the end of their long and busy days of nurturing, herding, and encouraging children to give reading with Dante a try.

As his handler, I love Dante’s enthusiasm and the joy of the kids. I am learning a lot about what children these days like to read, and about the extraordinary role that these librarians play in kids’ lives. It is a pleasure to see the children master reading skills, and find the joy that I’ve always found in books and reading. More than anything, though, is the sense of community with my fellow Cantabridgians. 🐾

A Bright Spot in a Difficult Season

by Dr. Becca Kitchell

My name is Dr. Becca Kitchell, and I serve as the Associate Dean of Student Development at CT State Community College – Three Rivers. This past fall was an especially heavy semester for our campus community. We experienced the heartbreaking loss of two students, and the broader events unfolding in the world felt scary and uncertain. Many of our students, faculty, and staff were carrying deep grief, fear, and a sense that our community felt broken in ways we didn't yet have words for.

In the midst of that pain, Bright Spot volunteers and their four-legged angels came to our campus – and brought something we desperately needed: comfort without conditions, presence without pressure, and connection without words (just a lot of wet noses and wet kisses).

The response was overwhelming in the most beautiful way. We were met with incredible outreach from Bright Spot's program leaders and volunteers, along with kind messages, generous time, and steady compassion. Their dogs didn't just visit our campus; they changed it. For a few precious hours, hallways softened, conversations opened, and people paused long enough to breathe. I heard from students "where are the dogs?" and "when are they coming back?" I would like to think that I was the popular one who brought the students to my office, but that would be a lie.

Dogs on campus have a unique magic. They bring students, faculty, and staff together in ways nothing else quite can. They create space for healing, for conversation, and for the opening of hearts. We saw students smile who hadn't smiled in weeks. We saw faculty linger, talk, and connect outside of classrooms and outside offices. We saw staff members exhale. The dogs didn't ask us to explain our grief – they simply sat with us in it.

Oliver

I personally came to know Bright Spot through my yoga instructor, Care Goodstall, whose dog, Oliver, was one of our beloved visitors. Watching Oliver and the other dogs move gently through our community – meeting people exactly where they were – was a powerful reminder that healing doesn't always come from words or solutions. Sometimes, it comes from a calm presence and a wagging tail. Other times it comes from silly dog tricks that make people laugh or deep doggy howls where treats aren't dispersed fast enough. It's pure magic.

We are a small campus with a big heart – but not nearly as big as the hearts of the dogs, program leaders, and volunteers who make Bright Spot possible. Because of the impact of these visits to our campus, we are eager to continue this partnership.

Our Veterans OASIS Center is interested in welcoming Bright Spot dogs on a weekly basis to support our veteran students, many of whom carry complex experiences of stress, transition, and loss. Our Mental Health and Wellness Center and my office are also exploring opportunities to host weekly dog hours, recognizing just how meaningful and grounding these moments can be for our entire community. None of this would be possible if it was not for the Bright Spot volunteers and their furry companions – they are a gift. 🐾

Bright Spot Receives Florence Bank Customers' Choice Community Grant

The Florence Bank Customers' Choice Community Grants Program was founded in 2002. Florence Bank customers are invited to vote for their favorite local nonprofit, hoping it will receive a share of the generous funding. Bright Spot is honored to be one of the wonderful nonprofits to receive a grant last year. Voting for this year's Florence Bank Customers' Choice Community Grants is open until December 31, 2026. Please consider voting for us again this year. The grant will be used to train and certify new therapy dog teams, which will help us continue to live our mission of providing comfort and caring through the human-canine bond. 🐾

Why I Give by Bryan Lorber

I met Bright Spot Founder Cynthia Hinckley on a bicycle ride when I first moved to the Pioneer Valley back in 2017. As anyone who meets her knows, she is a delightful person and I immediately felt a connection. I love dogs and, as a hospital based RN for 20 years, I certainly appreciate the value of therapy animals. Cynthia told me about the organization she founded and I mailed in a contribution. I have been an annual supporter of Bright Spot Therapy Dogs ever since. 🐾
